NEW THEATRE TALENT ON STAGE IN “PRODUCTION, TOO!” AT COLORADO STATE

Fort Collins, CO – Join the Colorado State University Division of Dance and Theatre and the campus chapter of the national theatre honorary fraternity Alpha Psi Omega for the second annual “Production, Too!,” a freshman showcase introducing the talents and personalities of new theatre majors on Dec. 3 and 4 at 10 p.m. This year’s event is titled “Late-Night Blackout Sketches X2 - Written by David, Walt and Harold” and features short scenes from plays by David Mamet, Walt Jones, and Harold Pinter, with all but one scene performed twice, but with very different interpretations. Admission cost is between $1 and $6 and determined by a roll of the die at the door of the Studio Theatre in the University Center for the Arts at 1400 Remington Street in Fort Collins.

“Production Too!” is a rite of passage for freshman Theatre majors requiring them to audition, rehearse, and perform on stage for an audience. It not only gives new majors the chance to get their feet wet in college theatre, but also gives more experienced students the opportunity to practice their casting and directing skills.

For this year’s event, student directors and actors explore contrasting interpretations through uncharted territory. They have been challenged to pursue “paths not taken” in the journey of the playwrights’ words from page to stage.

“The results will sometimes shock, often provoke laughter, and always entertain!” says Laura Jones, faculty supervisor of the project.
